This article provides a comprehensive overview of the Vietnamese language, including its grammar, vocabulary, and pronunciation. It is written in English and includes Vietnamese translations for all key terms.

Grammar

Vietnamese grammar is based on a subject-verb-object (SVO) word order. This means that the subject of a sentence comes before the verb, and the object of the sentence comes after the verb.

Vietnamese grammar also uses a system of classifiers. Classifiers are words that are used to indicate the type of noun that is being used. For example, the classifier "cái" is used for objects that are long and thin, such as pencils and sticks. The classifier "con" is used for objects that are small and round, such as balls and marbles.

Here is a table of some of the most common Vietnamese classifiers:

Classifier	Example	Translation
cái	cái bút	pen
con	con mèo	cat
chiếc	chiếc xe	car
tờ	tờ giấy	paper
quả	quả táo	apple

Vocabulary

Vietnamese vocabulary is very rich and varied. There are over 100,000 words in the Vietnamese language, and many of these words have multiple meanings. This can make it difficult for learners to master the Vietnamese vocabulary.

Here is a list of some of the most common Vietnamese words:

English	Vietnamese	Translation
hello	xin chào	hello
goodbye	tạm biệt	goodbye
thank you	cảm ơn	thank you
yes	có	yes
no	không	no

Pronunciation

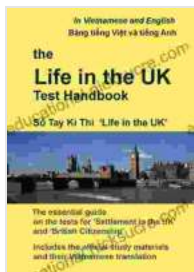

Vietnamese pronunciation is relatively simple. There are only six tones in Vietnamese, and each tone has a distinct meaning. The six tones are:

1. mid-level tone (no mark)
2. high-rising tone (´)
3. mid-falling tone (ˆ)
4. low-falling tone (˘)

The tone of a word can change the meaning of the word. For example, the word "ma" means "mother" when it is pronounced with the mid-level tone. However, the word "má" means "ghost" when it is pronounced with the low-falling tone.

This article has provided a comprehensive overview of the Vietnamese language, including its grammar, vocabulary, and pronunciation. By understanding the basics of Vietnamese, you will be well on your way to learning this beautiful and fascinating language.
